

ABORIGINAL ARTISTS

There is no written language for Australian Aboriginal People so in order to convey their important cultural stories through the generations it is portrayed by symbols/icons through their artwork. It is imperative to pass on information to preserve their culture. Indigenous art is centered on storytelling. It is used as a chronicle to convey knowledge of the land, events, and beliefs of the Aboriginal people. The use of symbols is an alternate way of writing down stories of cultural significance, teaching survival and the use of the land. The interpretations of the iconography differ depending on the audience.
